

My name is Alfie and I attended Ludlow School from 2011 to 2016. For GCSE, I chose triple science, history, art and drama and passed with A and B grades. During my time doing drama and art, I realised I enjoyed being creative and felt the best way for me to express myself would be through film, but found I'd much prefer to be behind a camera than in front of one. So, once I left Ludlow School for Hereford College I took up film studies, as well as English language and sociology so that I could become involved in making films. It was through my A Levels that I found out about the BFI Academy, which took in young people and gave them the opportunity to have masterclasses and make a film that would be shown at a local cinema. It was this Academy that ultimately helped me get into UWE Bristol to Study Filmmaking. Now that I've finished my time at University, I hope to get a job as an editor or camera operator and carry on my passion of filmmaking!
